POLLINATOR PAVILION

Pheasants Forever and Quail Forever are gearing up to celebrate our National Pheasant Fest & Quail Classic February 22-24, 2019. We will be highlighting the importance of pollinator habitat for bees and butterflies, as well as other wildlife -- namely upland birds. Seminars displays and informative interaction throughout the weekend will emphasize highly diverse pollinator habitat and its vital, dual role in producing pheasants and quail along with bees, butterflies and a host of other pollinator species.

The conservation organization's mission is focused on creating high-quality habitat for pheasants and quail. That very same habitat, filled with diverse grasses and forbs (flowering plants) is critical to a wide array of pollinating insects. For example, monarch butterflies are on the brink of joining the endangered species list. As a natural extension of creating the highest quality habitat for all wildlife, both organizations have made a point of including milkweed in project seed mixes.

Pheasants Forever and Quail Forever have impacted 155,974 acres for pollinators, including planting more than 643 million milkweed seeds. Putting this number into perspective, the organizations have made noteworthy contributions to the Pollinator Partnership Action Plan designated by the White House in 2016 which calls for one billion new milkweed stems established by 2020.
